United States.

8 March 1895.

Honored Colleague:

I mail along with this letter a copy of the January number of the American Mathematical Monthly which contains a sketch of my career.

I resigned from the University of Texas on account of the perpetual strife in that institution.

I intend to apply for a professorship of mathematics in one of the leading Universities of the North, where I shall have an opportunity to teach mathematical physics, and space-analysis, and also have facilities for further investigation. If you think that there is some merit in what I have already written, I shall be glad if you will send me some words of encouragement. I should show your letter to the President of the University (where I apply)

With sentiments of esteem
Yours very truly
Alexander Macfarlane.
